

TO LOVE EVERY HUMAN

Yes, merely with a self-centric vision
We avoid sharing love that dwells within
Bloated with pride, in a selfish stupor
We fail to reckon other's pain as ours.

If we choose love over hatred and fear
It's like choosing a pleasant life forever;
Instead of snapping the ties and traditions
Why not we opt for a cordial integration?

Often, time teaches us ever-new lessons
But, we ignore them with least concern,
Unaware that human life is a precious one
Yes, why do we hate 'to love every human'?

In the clouds of love there exists eternal bliss
They can create a lasting bondage amongst us;
Why not we irrigate the seeds of love within?
With every sprout saying, 'with me love begins'.

Dr. Ashok Chakravarthy Tholana
Hyderabad, Telangana State, INDIA